

Understanding movements and identifying important habitats of sea turtles in Western Australia

Status - Underway

Aims -To understand the connectivity between rookeries and foraging grounds including identifying interesting habitat and behaviours, migratory paths and foraging grounds and behaviour

Relevance - Spatial understanding of turtles during all life stages is important for managers to understand how potential pressures may impact the population. This information assists spatial planning for Marine Parks and Reserves and also informs fisheries and other resource users.

NWSFTCP Code -OA R 4 c

Partners -DBCA